Clover Hill Club Has Its Annual Christmas Part

Mrs. L. N. Herncall was hostess on Tuesday evening at a Christmas party for the Clover Hill Demonstration Club.

Beautiful home-made candles gave the rooms a rosy glow, while Christmas music was played softly in the background. This was a business and social meeting combined with the new president, Mrs. Russell Conner presiding. After the devotional, which included singing of Christmas Carols, a business meeting was held. Sixteen members answered the roll call.

Mrs. B. G. Anderson presented the new year books, which were sponsored, as usual, by the Bank of Appomattox. This service by the bank is deeply appreciated.

Hostesses for the year were appointed and a Federation Goal Committee named to compile a scrapbook on Citizenship and International Understanding.

The demonstration on "Teas and Receptions" was given by Mrs. Jacob Lewis and Mrs. R. C. Connor, and refreshments in accord with the theme were served by the hostess, assisted by the demonstrators.

The meeting adjourned with the exchange of gifts by the members.

In-Place Cleaning of Milk Pipelines Saves Labor, Lowers Cost

In-place cleaning of milk pipelines in dairy barns, if properly done, can result in less labor and in lower costs.

Dairy researchers at VPI say the use of cleaned-in-place milk pipelines has been increasing for the past several years, particularly where there are farm bulk tanks. Two types of installations are popular a pipeline circulating system where the milk lines are arranged in a circuit around the stanchion barn and milking parlor setups which have relatively short piping systems from the milking parlor to the milk house.

A definite cleaning-in-place procedure, adapted to the particular pipeline installation, should be established by the producer and posted in the milk house for reference. The following steps are suggested

Immediately after milking, flush the entire milker system, including teat cup assemblies and milk hose with warm water (100-110 degrees F.) until the discharge runs clear. The solution should be 139-140 degrees and should be at the strength recommended by the manufacturer. (An acid detergent solution should be used at least once a week in order to prevent a build-up of residues. There should be enough solution to provide a reserve in the wash tank at all times.)

After draining the cleaning solution, thoroughly rinse the line with hot water (130-149 degrees F.) to completely remove all traces of the cleaning solution.

Immediately before use, flush all milk contact surfaces with a 100 ppm. chlorine solution for at least five minutes.

If a build-up of residue in the pipeline is found, the operator probably has not followed a consistent and acceptable clean-up procedure. On the other hand, if a good clean-up is faithfully and consistently followed the physical appearance of the lines will be very good. The pipeline system must be kept clean if the clean-in-place method is to be approved.

Lameness may result and good egg production can not be expected where chickens not kept in warm houses have freezing of the combs wattles, toes and feet.

One-Family Homes Dominate New Housing

The one-family home, long a familiar and important part of American housing, has become an even more predominant characteristic since the end of World War II of the way people live.

Figures compiled by the U. S. Housing and Home Finance Agency on new home starts show that approximately seven out of every eight dwelling units built in the last few years have been one family residences. This is decidedly higher than the comparable proportion in past periods of building activity, going back to the turn of the century. During the building boom of the Twenties, in fact, single - family homes represented on the average only about six out of every ten dwelling units built in that period.

The trend toward more and more one-family homes, usually owner-occupied, is one of the significant social and economic developments that have occurred in the last generation. Home-ownership is one of the integral parts of our rising standard of living, and its growth is indicative of the financial progress the man in the street has made in recent years.

A fundamental factor, of course has been the great increase in the average level of income over the last decade. Figures compiled by the Federal Reserve Board show, for example, that the average income of all spending units exceeded $4,500 in 1953, a gain of $1,700, or approximately 60 per cent, over 1946.

Of great importance, too, from the potential home-owner's point of view, has been the abundance of mortgage money and the readiness of private lenders to make these funds available. Here the people's thrift institutions have played a major role. The life insurance companies, as an instance, now have about $25 billions of policyholder's funds invested in mortgage loans more than three times the 1946 total. Some 80 per cent of all these mortgages in number, and more than 40 per cent of the total dollar amount, are on one-family homes, it is estimated.

Two-Family Type on Wane

The increased popularity of the one-family residense has been accompanied by a marked decline in the number as well as proportion of other types of dwelling units being built. The record shows that the two-family type of residence has lost ground and now only an inconsequential construction picture. At the Twenties the two-fa represented as much a of all new dwelling uni equivalent proportion ding to the latest ES only about 3 per cent, tion since 1960.

The multi-family ty unit has likewise shown tial decline in importa years. Since 1955 few cent of all dwelling uni in the multi-family class contrast, the proportion more than 30 per cent in the Twenties (1927 a

in our town . . .

There's the holly and mistletoe and the candles all aglow!
There's the bells gaily ringing and the carolers singing!
There's the trees lit and the wonderful gifts stacked high!
There's the candy and fruit . . .
the cake and the punch!
There's the snow that falls and the laughter and cheer . . . and they all add up to a happy holiday and grand New Year.

STRICTLY FOR THE BIRDS IS GOOD ADVICE FOR WINTER

A cake strictly for the birds is being suggested as one means of helping the feathered friends get through the winter.

VPI specialists suggest making the cake this way: warm five pounds of suet, in a double boiler until pliable; stir in 3 pounds of sunflower seed and 2 boxes of canary seed. Pour into a shallow container such as that used for ice cubes. Chill and cut into small squares. Wrap with half-inch-mesh galvanized wire, tie, and suspend from a branch. If the larger birds, such as redbirds and catbirds, are to feed from it, hang the feed so the birds will have a perch.

A drinking fountain or pan of water should be located where the birds can drink. Be sure it is not near shrubs where cats can conceal themselves.

Grit is all too often overlooked in planning for the birds. A small container with sharp sand or cinders will be visited freely.

For other food, get a mixture of seed that is sold for wild birds. Any feed store will carry the seed. In it will be millet and sunflower seed some cracked corn, and possibly some wheat. Supplement the grain with suet which chickadees and downy woodpeckers like especially well.

The feeding station should be where cats cannot prey upon the birds, and if you can see it readily from your house you will have a chance to study winter birds and their habits.

Remember the four essentials for bird feeding stations are food, water, grit, and cover.

Appomattox is a growing town.
